The Legislature of West Virginia Hunting John Morgan,

Editore Intelligencer: Much has been said relative to the Morgan race. We propose to add a little of our experience. You have already been informed how many of us volunteered, on Friday to look after Morgan, and how we marched up the dusty streets of Wheeling, and then marched down again. Early Saturday morning we were under arms again; we marched across the great saspension bridge and then marched back again; "and woe unto the mullen stalks that in our way we met." Next we sailed up the great Ohio, "against the northern winds," touching the shore here and there to learn Morgan's whereabouts. Messrs, General Bowyer, Ballard, Hall and Kyle, privates in Capt. Kramer's company, went on shore - for their supper, &c., being detained longer than they should have been, EALER IN WROUGHT IRON. GALVANIZED.

Mr. Hall was first best, Kyle second. bost. Mr. Hall was first best, Kyle second, Bowyer and Ballard a tie race. The boys looked pretty red when they came up. But none of your insinuations. It was enough to start the blood to any man's head to outrun a steamboat, on a hot day. Messrs, Wheat, Kyle and Robison were sent to move all the crafts from the Ohio side of the river, which they did by the means of a skiff. Mr. Wheat and a private of Capt. West's company, went on shore to recon-noiter, but stayed so long that the balance of the squad left, leaving a skill which had tude of readers. The intervening time be-been captured, for Mr. Wheat and partner tween September 1st, 1861, and May 1st, to convey themselves elsewhere; but neither of them being oarsmen, they drifted on to an island. young man, who had imposed himself upon From his affections in a manner that would stir chase, and followed Stonewall to Port Rethe holy church. Thus the night was passed, and morning found us moored and straud twenty-five miles above Wheeling, on the West Virginia shore, but no Morgan in sight. After breakfast, I was ordered by Lieut. T. R. McCann to cross the river with a scouting party, and if possible, to find out where Morgan and his band were.

miles before we came across Morgan's trail, we followed it but a short distance, learning he had turned north, we passed one mile north of Richmond, falling in with part of the 3d Ohio volunteer cavalry, who had been following Morgan from Kentuc-ky—we marched with them. I had been compelled to ride an old red, wind-broken horse, who wheezed liky a steamboat at the time until December 18th, when our first, but the further we traveled, and the corps (the 11th) was ordered to Frederickshouse to provide the provider by the line of the like but the first but the further we traveled, and the corps (the 11th) was ordered to Frederickshouse to provide the provider but helps. faster we went the better be got; and when we fell in with the regular cavalry, "old bay" was the most spirited horse in the crowd. We soon forgot it was the Sabbath day, and da hed on Jehn like; but too far south to be present when John surrendered. All day we seen people running to and fro; some said Morgan was one place and some another. Finally in the evening John caved in though we did not get to see him until next morning.

Sabbath evening we set out across the country, to the base of operations, (the gusboat,) stopping with a Union family we had passed in the morning, we took dinner and supper all in one. left the rebel's horses and set out on foot to Steubenville, falling in with a kind gentleman, we rode with him in his wagen, passing down through town, he informed the bystanders and enquirers after Morgan, that I was the man, and you may presume a crowd followed. Morgan came during the night, made quite a fluttering amongst the people, who desired a sight of the chief. About seven o'clock, A. M., Monday morning, he was ordered out of the cars, and then there was a rush such as I never saw before, except at Louisville, Ky, when it was thought Buckner was going to sack the city. Morgan made his appearance at the car door; the men were bayoneted away, but, like scooping the water out of the Ohio river, the vacum was soon filled with hoops, lawns, calico, silks, &c., which were so elastic and spongy that bayonets nade but little impression upon them, Every man having a gun in his hand were ordered to drive the crowd back and open the way, I took advantage of the order: rushing forward I took my position by the side of Morgan and marched with him through the town, conversing with him on the way. As we passed along a thousand voices would enquire at once, "Which is Morgan?" Morgan frequently replied himself that he was the man. One woman asked him for a newspaper which he had rolled up in his hand. "Certainly mad-am," said he, "anything I can do for you, you have my heart already." Oue of his aids told me that they had been in the saddle thirty two days, and that one bundred and fifty thousand men had been after them during that time. At twenty minutes to eight, A. M., the cars started with Morgan and his staff for Columbus. and we came back to Wheeling, where I reported myself on Tuesday to Lieutenant

T. K. McCang.
Col. K. V. Whaley, Ex-Congressmen. was with the gunbont party. We noticed be had buckled on the cartridge-box, rifle in hand. He is au old soldier, and has three wounds on his person, received in different engagements, in Mexico, in the service of our country. S Young. P. Pilson (Fremont's Chief of artillery reported to the General that he "considered Buell's (Peirpoint) battery the best in his command," this teo at a time when the artillery of that corps consisted of eleven batteries. Capt. Huntington who com manded our Brigade during the late engagement, and whose own battery was in the engagement, said in his report, "Peir point Battery worked manfully. I never saw guns better served in my life, from the beginning of the engagement until they fired their last guo"-1320 rounds. Such is the meed of praise we have ever won, and I repeat these remarks here not alone because we feel proud to have won such laurels, but because I think it will gratify the people of West Virginia to know that they have troops that can acquire such fame, During the past three months we have are consequently well worn down. We now design to return to Western Virginia, believing that we can be more beneficial SUTLERS AND AGENTS there than here. Our battery on Wheeling hill would be of more value in case of an invasion, than an entire regiment of infantry. A battery at Fairmont would have been sufficient to have prevented the invasion of that place. We could be of service in the mounted brigade now forming out of old regiments. We hope that Governo Boreman will take our desire into consideration and use his influence to have us removed to that section of the State and, if necessary, re-fill the vacancy thus made in this army with troops that have not had quite so much rough usage. The belligerent sky begins to brighten and I trust that the day is not far distant when peace will dawn upon us and we be once more a free, united and happy people

Atter sinking one skiff, the scouting party got safely across. We proceeded to the house of one rebel Valandighamite, where we pressed four horses into the service.—
The old man whined a little of course, but the sight of guns wilted him. Our bass drummer, whose name I do not remember, got the old man's fine steed and set off in search of Morgan before the rest of us got our horses, as they were in the fields. We mounted and out across the hills about 8 A. M.; calling at the house of a man we suspected for a butternut, we got a saddle for a soldier whose name I do not remember.
